EARLY BEGINNINGS

Back in 2007, along with a small group of colleagues and collaborators, we started to consider organising a scientific and professional conference regarding social and human sciences. In spite of the fact that we, at start, had very small funds, we had a substantial amount of trust and confidence and we were also armed with the support and enthusiasm of our students. With the help of all that, we managed to create a very promising organising plan (the first plan of all those that followed during the next years) and, almost unexpectedly, we managed to set up the final dimensions of the conference.

After launching the final announcement, we waited. To everyone's surprise, including the organisers', the first people started to sign up to attend the conference. At first, they weren't very numerous, but soon many more followed and the sign ups started transforming and becoming more constant and stable.

The first 647 participants who were present at the first edition of our conference offered us a lot more trust and confidence and power so we managed to organise this conference each and every year.

BACKGROUND

Over a century ago, psychology took a decisive step in its evolution, breaking away from the mother-philosophy and developing its own research field, its own conceptual and methodological machinery. The young science was thus trying to become non-speculative, practical, applied, going slowly towards a new occupational axis: observation, analysis, intervention, improvement as far as psycho-behavioural, social or organizational processes and phenomena are concerned.

At the beginning of the 21st century, psychology introduces itself as a matured, adaptable, particularly diverse science, bearing a great number of branches and sub-branches, carrying great and obvious impact on modern man, on groups and organizations, on society as a whole. Psychology is visibly going through a stage of scientific development, of enrichment concerning the conceptual system, of diversification of the kit of methods, instruments and work techniques. Nowadays psychological research plays an essential part, outlining and revealing new human and social horizons. By integrating in a way proper to its means a mixture of instruments and techniques of investigation and intervention, psychological research becomes the primary force of modern psychology, a truly vanguardist element. In this framework, it is our belief that organizing a scientific event dedicated to research in psychology would be most welcome.

TARGETS OF THE CONFERENCE

- Our primary target includes the gathering of specialists, of highly skillful practitioners in the field, with a view to exchanging information. We aim at providing specialists with the opportunity to present their work, to reveal their latest research methods and instruments, to achieve intensive informational exchange, to the benefit of all taking part, as well as of psychology as a whole.

- The purpose of this conference is to tackle practical, methodological aspects of health, education and social sciences (psychology, sociology, pedagogy, medical sciences, etc.), stemming from current research and its methodological, ethical, social, and cultural ramifications. We therefore aim to avoid purely theoretical, speculative activities, and organize instead practical, applied activities (workshops, debates), starting from topics of particular interest in field.
- Since the future of the profession lies in the hands of current students, our event will include a special section dedicated to our future colleagues. Our purpose is to facilitate the contact between students and highly praised specialists, to accustom them to the relevant topics of modern research, to raise up the quality standards within training process, to contribute thus to the shaping of specialized knowledge and the enhancement of the experience of the students involved. Students will therefore benefit from specific scientific events, where they can reveal their own research work and projects, from round tables, trainings and workshops dealing with particularly interesting topics, all under the supervision of acclaimed specialists from various branches of psychology.
- The city of Sibiu was nominated, for 2007, alongside with Luxemburg, as an European Cultural Capital. Thus becoming one of the bridges through which Europe will come to know Romania. The enlargement of the E.U. is likely to encourage the informational exchange between specialists, to promote the cultural, scientific, civic values under the auspices of the new 21st century.
